In recent years, there has been a demand for a semiconductor material having a low specific resistance not only for construction of semiconductor elements, but also for structural uses such as short-circuit materials for current transmissions. Silicon and SiC are currently most widely used as semiconductor materials for low resistance applications. However, as the I-V characteristics are unsatisfactory in silicon and too high in specific resistance in SiC, alternative semiconductor materials such as amorphous silicon or a-Si:H have been investigated. Among various

1. Field of the Invention The present invention relates to a piezoelectric ultrasonic motor, which converts ultrasonic vibrations generated by applying an electric power to a piezoelectric element into a driving force to generate a rotary motion, and more specifically, to a structure that can obtain the preferable characteristics in high-speed rotation and fast response. 2. Description of the Related Art Ultrasonic motors that generate a rotary motion using ultrasonic vibrations generated by applying an electric power to a piezoelectric element are attracting attention as a motor that can be reduced in size, weight, and cost, and further, is superior in quietness. The ultrasonic motors have been used in small apparatuses and as driving units in mechanical devices, such as printers and information apparatus. For example, in Japanese Patent Application Laid-open No. 2000-288417, there is disclosed an apparatus that includes a piezoelectric actuator. The piezoelectric actuator includes a piezoelectric element that is linearly polarized or excited. There is disclosed a piezoelectric motor in which an actuator is mounted between a base and a plate in Japanese Patent Application Laid-open No. 2000-56657, and the actuator includes a piezoelectric element that is linearly polarized or excited. The piezoelectric element is interposed between a vibration plate and the base. The plate is fixed to the base by a screw or the like. There is disclosed a piezoelectric motor in which an actuator includes a piezoelectric element that is linearly polarized or excited, and a base includes a vibrating plate provided with a piezoelectric element fixed to the base. The plate is fixed to the base by screw or the like in Japanese Patent Application Laid-open No. 2000-188508. There is disclosed a piezoelectric motor in which an actuator includes a piezoelectric element that is linearly polarized or excited, and a base includes a vibrating plate that is fixed to the base by screw or the like in Japanese Patent Application Laid-open No. Hei 7-128947. The conventional ultrasonic motors can be reduced in size and weight in comparison with conventional DC motors, and can start rotation from zero. Hence, the ultrasonic motors can be used as a drive source in low-speed
